Description

Provide a short description of the event and its activities.

On Monday, July 1, 2024, the first event within the JURKA 24-25 project took place in Duga Resa.

The event began with an opening speech by the Mayor of Karlovac County, Ms. Martina Furdek Hajdin, who emphasized the crucial importance of the activities of cultural and artistic societies in preserving and strengthening national identity.

The Mayor of Črnomelj, Mr. Andrej Kavšek, greeted the attendees and expressed his pleasure at the start of this important project, highlighting the significance of cross-border cooperation and the connection of youth through the preservation of cultural heritage.

Barbara Papež Lavrič, director of RIC Bela krajina, presented the goals and activities of the JURKA 24-25 project and the Jurjevanje Folklore Festival in Bela krajina. Mr. Željko Štajcer, director of the International Folklore Festival Karlovac, presented the concept and challenges of the festival, emphasizing that folklore helps preserve cultural heritage.

After the presentation of festivals, we conducted the workshop. First, we divided the participants into groups, where they shared their opinions and ideas on specific topics.

During the workshop participants proposed how festivals, workshops, and cultural events can contribute to preserving cultural heritage and European cultural values, as well as foster cultural cohesion and strengthen identity.

During the workshop, we discussed about benefits and challenges of collaboration between folklore groups from different countries and how groups can assist in organizing cross-border cultural events.

Key Findings:

The participants at the workshop agreed that folklore festivals play a crucial role in preserving cultural heritage. They provide various forms of interaction among people, promote cultural exchange, and contribute to the awareness and appreciation of cultural values. Through festivals, a more connected community can be achieved, one that is open to diverse cultural experiences while also being proud of its own heritage.

Collaboration between folklore groups from different countries offers numerous advantages, including the broadening of cultural horizons, modernization of folklore activities, increased respect for one's own culture, and the strengthening of intercultural dialogue. However, challenges such as logistical and financial issues must be carefully managed to ensure successful cooperation.

Folklore groups play a key role in organizing and executing cross-border cultural events. Through collaboration, experience sharing, and joint efforts, they can contribute to the greater visibility and preservation of cultural heritage and the enhancement of intercultural dialogue.

This summary outlines the main findings and recommendations of the workshop and offers guidelines for further improvements in organizing cross-border cultural events:

- Conducting workshops that involve exchanges among event participants,
- Increasing the involvement of local residents in workshops,
- Continuing to promote cultural heritage through various channels,
- Improving logistical and financial planning for easier management of international exchanges,
- Strengthening institutional support and cooperation with local tourism organizations,
- Encouraging cross-border cooperation and exchanges between folklore groups to strengthen intercultural dialogue,
- Increasing the involvement of young people and the local community in organizing cultural events,
- Improving communication and promotion for greater visibility of cultural events,
- Supporting joint project applications to secure funding and further develop of cultural activities.

The Folklore group Dragatuš performed two traditional folk songs ("Najprvi Štjajeriš" and "Tančka,") during the workshop.

After the workshop, participants had the opportunity to network and discuss further collaboration.

The event concluded with a performance by Folklore group Dragatuš on International Folklore Festival Karlovac, which was held that day in Duga Resa.

We evaluate that the first event within the JURKA 24-25 project was very well received and carried out successfully.
